DIARY NOTES

19 February 1960

DD/S [REDACTED]

1. Lyman Kirkpatrick called my attention to an item in the January-February Training Bulletin announcing the beginning of a Professional Typing Course. I have asked [REDACTED] to look into this to see where the requirements come from.

2. At the Deputies' Meeting we discussed at some length two problems having to do with CIA's representation at and presentations to Defense Schools. The first problem has to do with coordination within CIA by the several speakers who go to these Schools each year. There was unanimous agreement that there should be a central point to coordinate these activities. Each speaker when invited directly should coordinate with this point, as certain who else has been or is going to this School, what they covered, etc. Speakers should also file copies of their scripts, notes, etc., with this central point. The Director approved of this and I have asked Matt Baird to draft an appropriate Notice. The second problem has to do with presentations concerning CIA activities per se. The Director agreed that it was in our own best interest to approach the Services and offer to provide a block of coordinated and integrated CIA instruction. There was unanimous agreement that this was desirable and the Director authorized the Deputy Director (Support) and the Director of Training to explore the matter on an informal basis and report back.

3. [REDACTED] buzzed to say that at General Cabell's meeting with Bob Macy, Bureau of the Budget, concerning the "intelligence coordination survey" Bob had proposed, presumably on behalf of Gordon Gray, Director, Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization, that the committee be made up only of Gordon Gray's representative, the Bureau of the Budget's representative and a CIA representative. General Cabell voiced his strong opposition to this and told him that he thought the Department of State and the Department of Defense certainly should be on a committee and that probably the three Services should be also. Roy said that it was clear, as I had suspected, that Bob would like to turn this around so that it really appeared that the Director was making this investigation. This is the one point we certainly want to avoid and according to Roy, General Cabell made this quite clear to Bob.

4. Stanley Grogan was in to advise me that Lyman Kirkpatrick would receive his award on 15 March and that [REDACTED] would also receive an award for which we recommended him at the Presidential Arms on Feb. 26th.

with the President's trips. They hoped that we could now find a Russian ^{speaking} Security man to accompany the President to the USSR and the Director asked us to look into this.

b. The Director signed a letter to the Secretary of Defense which I have not seen but which will, subject to Bureau of the Budget approval, obligate us to buy $2 million worth of equipment to be put into an airplane for an especially sensitive project. Assuming that the Secretary concurs, which he undoubtedly will, we will then have to go to the Bureau to obtain the release.

6. Stanley Grogan also brought to my attention the outside activities being carried on by [REDACTED] of the Management Staff which do sound rather extensive and which I think that I should look into.
